Manchester's new quarter

The district of New Cross was once the centre of production for Penny Broadships in the 18th and 19th century. It will now be transformed into one of the most exciting new neighbourhoods in Manchester once again, making it a hub of activity.

The New Cross development strategy set out by Manchester City Council will see hundreds of apartments and townhouses that will regenerate and transform one of the last undeveloped parts of the city centre. New Cross will create a new public space, improved walking and transport links and seamlessly knit the area into the growth and expansion of the city centre.

New Cross is the last piece of the Manchester city centre jigsaw, creating an opportunity unlike any other. New Cross Central will be at the heart of this transformation.

A place to make your mark

New Cross Central is perfectly positioned to explore the cultural highlights of Manchester. You can be in the heart of the Northern Quarter in less than a five-minute walk. From there, you're spoilt for choice with independent shops, restaurants and bars to pick from.

Up-and-coming Ancoats is right on your doorstep too, with everything from co-working spaces, to pizzerias and breweries. New Cross Central doesn't just have exciting surroundings, the vision is to create a new neighbourhood. A place that is community-focused, with events that make residents from neighbouring districts come to visit. Known as Manchester's creative hub, the streets are bustling with modern street art, incredible architecture and independent traders.

Far enough away from the hustle and bustle of the centre but only a 10 minute walk away from Manchester's major travel routes, The Northern Quarter is the perfect place to work. From creative agencies to solicitors, Manchester welcomes all. If you're a new start up, then we have plenty of co-working spaces for you to choose from, and for larger companies, we have stunning, red brick buildings that span over several floors.
